The 9th Annual RFA Santa Fe Staff Developer's Conference From Staff Room to Classroom:

Planning for the Transition to Common Core Standards President's Weekend - February 18, 19, 20, 2012

Seminar Design & Description:

Bring your Common Core Standards Planning Team to Santa Fe, February 18, 19, 20 (President's Weekend) and leave with a fully-realized professional development plan, customized to your district needs and ready for the initial rollout or for continued and sustained implementation. The dual focus of Common Core Standards of balancing rich subject matter content and rigorous 21st Century thinking skills, raises the bar for K12 classrooms.

With high client interest on this emerging topic, The 9th Annual RFA Santa Fe Staff Developers Conference will offer a focus on the Common Core State Standards (CCSS). This timely topic makes this 3-day seminar the perfect professional learning opportunity to develop the initial launch of the CCSS or to continue your efforts with highly engaging learning.

A large part of the seminar is dedicated to INPUT of content from Robin Fogarty & Brian Pete. The information is presented using the best practices in staff development. Participants engage in highly interactive strategies designed for the adult learner that transfer back to the site immediately.

During the conference, an important component is about participant OUTPUT. This is when the school or district teams use dynamic professional development planning tools to conceptualize, design and plan professional development for their school or district. When participants leave the Santa Fe Conference, they have learned, they have developed and they have applied a PD that is relevant and specific to their on-site needs.

The goal of the change agent is to help teachers transfer new ideas, concepts and strategies from the staff room to the classroom. This is a specially designed seminar that teaches you how to do exactly that and in this case, it is with the specific content of the new Common Core Standards.

Teaching teachers and reaching teachers are two different things. With that said, the most expensive professional development is the one that teachers do not apply in the classroom. Join this network of premier educators and learn cost-effective ways to bring professional learning to your site.

Each participant at the Santa Fe Conference will:

- 1) LEARN the skills and strategies needed to conduct on-site PD workshops that transfer immediately to the K12 classroom, with tools and techniques that are research-based, user- friendly and highly practical.
- 2) DESIGN professional development experiences that are systemic, practical, job-embedded and sustained over time, to foster immediate, relevant take-aways.
- 3) EMBRACE the best practices in professional development and essential elements of Joyce and Shower's proven training model.
- 4) PRACTICE the presentation skills of sage on the stage, the facilitation skills of guide on the side, as well as the mediation skills of the coach in the field.
